How habits take root

21 ideas from the best books on habits

My habit

Week 1 · days 1 to 7

1 Find your why

Begin with the end in mind: with this habit, who will you grow into?

"Every action is a vote for the type of person you wish to become." James Clear, Atomic Habits

2 Make it tiny

Start by making your habit tiny and practice the art of showing up for it. Later, you'll let it grow.

"Keeping the habit alive means keeping it rooted in your routine no matter how tiny it is." BJ Fogg, Tiny Habits

3 Don't break the chain

Your habit is growing step by step, day by day. You're adding rings to the chain.

"Don't-break-the-chain is a powerful strategy." Gretchen Rubin, Better Than Before

4 Find what works for you

Your daily life is the soil in which your habit is taking root: make sure they are made for each other.

"To shape our habits successfully, we must know ourselves." Gretchen Rubin, Better Than Before

5 Design an implementation intention

Invite your habit like you invite a friend: be precise with when and where.

"Give your habits a time and a space to live in the world." James Clear, Atomic Habits

6 Make it visible

Give your habit presence: choose a visible cue that will greet you each day.

"No behavior happens without a prompt." BJ Fogg, Tiny Habits

7 Use temptation bundling

Pick an activity you enjoy, the carrot, and pair it with your habit.

"When dopamine rises, so does our motivation to act." James Clear, Atomic Habits

8 Enter into a habit contract

Find an accountability partner: a friend who will offer tough love and cupcakes of encouragement.

"When another pair of eyes is watching, we feel as if the magnitude of whatever we're doing has multiplied." Ayelet Fishbach, Get It Done

9 Prime your environment

Design your habit with the lazy days in mind. How easy can you make it? What hurdles can you remove?

"Make it easy to do right, and hard to go wrong." Gretchen Rubin, Better Than Before

10 Be gentle

Your habit is alive, let it flex with life. A little self-kindness keeps it sustainable.

"Too much rigidity is the enemy of a good habit." Katy Milkman, How to Change

11 Use habit stacking

Pick a habit you already have and make it a cue for your new habit. The new one will piggyback on the existing one.

"You already have an entire ecosystem of routines humming along nicely; you just have to tap into it." BJ Fogg, Tiny Habits

12 Celebrate

Find a tiny treat that feels good and let yourself have it right after your habit.

"Emotions create habits. Not repetition. Not frequency. Not fairy dust. Emotions." BJ Fogg, Tiny Habits

13 Never miss twice

A missed day is a pause, not an ending. Whatever happens, come back to your habit the very next day.

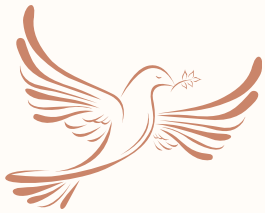

"Missing once is an accident. Missing twice is the start of a new habit." James Clear, Atomic Habits

14 Do it publicly

Add a pinch of positive social pressure to your habit: let people know.

"If you believe that others are rooting for your success and keeping an eye on your behavior, you'll be more motivated to do the right thing." Kelly McGonigal, The Willpower Instinct

15 Create a positive environment

Can you simplify, beautify your surroundings?

"A clean, well-maintained environment helps to foster a sense of self-command, which in turn makes it easier to maintain good habits." Gretchen Rubin, Better Than Before

16 Let a good habit break a bad one

Your good habit may be coming in place of a bad one, encourage this shift.

"How to break a bad habit: make it invisible, make it unattractive, make it difficult." James Clear, Atomic Habits

17 Surround yourself

Spend time with friends who already have your habit and will support you.

"Be in good company when you hope to achieve big goals." Katy Milkman, How to Change

18 Design safeguards

Life will get in the way of your habit. Prepare if-then plans so that your life and your habit can remain good friends.

"Predict how and when you might be tempted to break your vow, and imagine a specific plan of action for not giving in." Kelly McGonigal, The Willpower Instinct

19 Benefit others

Picture the fruits of your habit and who they will benefit.

"As you breathe in, cherish yourself. As you breathe out, cherish all beings." Dalai Lama

20 Make success visible

Your 21-day challenge is soon over, congrats! Keep counting your successes with a tick or a number in your calendar.

"If we want something to count in our lives, we should figure out a way to count it." Gretchen Rubin, Better Than Before

21 Expect more

Keep your habit fresh and fun: scale it up, bring variety into it.

"The greatest threat to success is not failure but boredom." James Clear, Atomic Habits
